Changing Times and Jesus' Teachings

By WILLIAM L. TRIMYER
A Radical New Life-Style
Lesson for January 31, 1982
Bible Study Passage: Luke 6:27-38

INTRODUCTION

Luke's Sermon on the Plain and Matthew's Sermon on the Mount correspond closely. They both begin with the Beatitudes of Jesus. These sayings of Jesus on the plain have mountaintop implications. They prescribe a radical new life-style unlike anything the disciples had experienced before.

The teachings of Jesus were not in line with the expectations of many. Those who looked for a militant messiah would have expected to hear the stinging words of a warrior bent upon destruction of the opposition. But Jesus came teaching and practicing humility and love for one's enemies.

The words that Jesus spoke were like bombshells to the hearers steeped in Jewish law and tradition. Jesus initiated a revolutionary life-style that countered many of the teachings and traditions of his day. The response to him and his teachings was often negative. His own people could neither accept him nor cling to his teachings. In many ways Jesus was a threat to the status quo and a thorn in the side of the Pharisees. Yet he was a champion of God's purposes and intentions for his people, a savior who had come to show people life both abundant and eternal.

Loving Ugly People [Luke 6:27-31]

Loving enemies and unlovely people is sometimes an impossible task. Human nature seems to dictate that we cannot be bosom buddies with everyone. There are some people I simply don't like. We all have someone in our repertoire of acquaintances whom we do not particularly care for.

Loving our spouses or children is a natural response within the heart, but to love an enemy is something we have to will within ourselves to do. The Greek word for this type of love is agape, a love that seeks the highest good for those we label as enemies or ugly people.

Jesus also in this passage lays down what has come to be known as the "Golden Rule." Some may be surprised to know that Jesus was not the originator of the "Golden Rule." In fact, Confucius said nearly four hundred years before Christ, "What you wish that your brother would not do to you, you refrain from doing to him." Jesus came along and reversed the negative version of the "Golden Rule" to read, "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."

One More Mile [Luke 6:32-36]

The Christian faith is based on extras. Jesus said that one of the marks of true discipleship is the willingness to go the extra mile in helping people. Jesus did not believe in or practice the notion of "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours." Jesus encourages his followers to be God-like in their actions towards others.

God, through Christ, embraces both the saint and the sinner. As God's people, we are called to care for people in ways that bring about redemption, reconciliation and their highest good. Jesus called his disciples to follow him in all ways, and that included going the extra mile for someone in need.

The Rewards of Kindness [Luke 6:37-38]

Most of us know the good feeling that comes from doing something nice for another person. But we must remember that we do not give and do because it feels good, but because it is the commandment of Christ. Some people perform good deeds because they hope for such deeds in return. Some may place ten percent in the collection plate because they secretly hope for a twenty percent return on their investment. "Give and it shall be given you" does not necessarily imply a high reimbursement on our giving. It does mean that God will take care of us. Those who practice the ways of Christ are blessed and compensated, and not necessarily in cash returns.

In our day and age the practice of self-denial is a premium. Sometimes it is all too easy to overlook the crying needs of others because we happen to be so caught up in pursuit of our own needs.

Assessing results

How does a school system measure its success?

There are many areas that must be considered. These include ratio of teachers to pupils, instructional materials, involvement of parents in the educational program of their children, competencies of personnel, scope of the curriculum and extra curricular activities.

Other areas include expenditure of funds per student, test scores of students, percentage of students receiving further education and the holding power of the schools.

All of these areas are important and must be evaluated carefully. However, there is no better measure of the quality of a school system than the success of its graduates.

From a follow-up study of 1979 graduates of Appomattox County High School it was determined that a majority of the students (79.9 percent) receiving further education feel that the school system prepared them fairly well to very well for college. Although 13.9 percent of the students reported that they were not well prepared for college, further checking has revealed that these students are succeeding very well in college.

Approximately sixty (60 percent) of the 1979 graduates graduate from the public school system in Appomattox County enter the job market. When the survey of 1979 graduates was conducted in the fall of 1980, seventy-one (71) percent of the students who entered the job market upon graduation from high school were still in the same job. Forty-four (44) percent indicated that they were in a job related to the training they received in high school.

Students surveyed were asked to make suggestions to improve the school curriculum. In general students recommended a more comprehensive English curriculum with emphasis on literature and writing. "Knowing how to write effective papers is crucial in college because often it is one's only opportunity to communicate to the professor what the individual has learned," stated one student. Other suggestions included a class on "How To Study," and advanced placement courses.

Suggestions made by students are taken seriously. During the current school session some changes have been made in the English curriculum at Appomattox County High School to provide a more comprehensive English program for college-bound students.

The school system will continue to collect follow-up studies of former students. Knowing the accomplishments of high school graduates and receiving suggestions from these students will contribute to the continued progress of the school system.

In January of this year a very informal survey was conducted with 1981 graduates who were enrolled in college during the fall of 1981. The results were very gratifying.

More than ninety (90) percent of the students succeeded very well in college. Several students found college very difficult but returned for the winter semester. An impressive percentage of students earned the Dean's Honor List.

The Appomattox County School Board and the citizens of this county are proud of the accomplishments of graduates of the school system. Appomattox County has provided the locality, state and nation with competent persons in the areas of businesses, industries, government, trades....To help students meet present and future demands the school system must continue to improve the effectiveness of its instructional program and the services provided to students. The system has experienced very acceptable progress in many areas in recent years. With the support and assistance of citizens of the county progress will continue.

Central Fidelity reports

Central Fidelity Banks, Inc. reported record earnings today and its seventh consecutive year of gains in net operating earnings. The company also recorded new highs in total assets and deposits for 1981.

Income before securities transactions for the year was $18,043,000 or $3.42 per share, compared to $15,822,000 or $2.88 per share in 1980, representing an increase of 18.8% on a per share basis. Net income per share increased 10.3% to $3.01 on earnings of $15,930,000 compared to $2.73 per share on earnings of $14,986,000 in the previous year.

New highs in total assets and deposits were also achieved for the year ended December 31, 1981. Total assets reached $2.115 billion, up 10.8% from the previous year, while total deposits increased 6.7% to $1.591 billion. The company's return on average assets for 1981 was 0.93%, up from 0.892 in 1980, and the return on aveage common stockholders' equity increased to 15.83% compared to 14.81% for the previous year.

For the fourth quarter of 1981, income before securities transactions increased 8.1% on a per share basis to $0.80 compared to $0.74 earned in the fourth quarter of 1980. Net income per share declined 4.4% to $0.65 compared to $0.68 per share in the previous year.

According to Carroll L. Saine, chairman and chief executive officer of Central Fidelity Banks, Inc., "The record earnings for 1981 were the result of a higher level of earning assets, increased net interest income, increased non-interest income and effective control over operating expenses."

For the year, average earning assets increased 9.8% to $1.727 billion and net interest income improved 5.10% to $73,274,000. Non-interest income, principally deposit fees, totalled $19,855,000, up 25.8%, while operating expenses of $71,037,000 increased 7.9%.

The provisions for loan losses for the fourth quarter and the entire year of 1981 were $1,213,000 and $4,416,000, respectively, down slightly from the corresponding periods of 1980. Net loan charge-offs for the same periods were $1,134,000 and $3,648,000, respectively compared to $1,888,000 and $4,364,000 in 1980. At December 31, 1981 the allowance for possible loan losses was $12,342,000 or 1.22% of net loans, while total non-performing assets were $8,930,000 or 0.89% of net loans.

In separate action, the board declared a $0.31 per share cash dividend on the company's Common Stock. This dividend is payable April 1, 1982 to stockholders of record March 12, 1982. The board also declared a $1.50 per share quarterly cash dividend on the $6.00 Cumulative Convertible Voting Preferred Stock, Series A payable May 1, 1982 to stockholders of record April 9, 1982.

Central Fidelity Banks, Inc. is a Richmond-based multi-bank holding company which operates six banks with 126 offices and six bank-related subsidiaries.
